MuraConnect: three commercial observations from ProfitPulse

01

Growth is outrunning cash conversion

MuraConnect grew revenue 90 percent to $10.1 million on a recruitment and IT project model where placed staff are usually paid weekly while enterprise and government clients settle on 30 to 60 day terms. Every new placement widens that gap before the cash lands. A Working Capital Unlock maps exactly where it sits.

02

Public sector clients concentrate the risk

As a Supply Nation accredited, Indigenous owned provider on the buy.nsw panel, MuraConnect likely draws a large share of its $10.1 million revenue from a small number of public sector and enterprise relationships. Knowing which panels and clients drive margin, not just turnover, matters as contracts renew.

03

People cost is the business, so utilisation is the lever

In a recruitment and IT consultancy, gross margin is set by billable utilisation and placement fee capture, not headcount growth. At 90 percent growth it is easy to add delivery capacity faster than utilisation is tracked. A monthly view of revenue per consultant keeps growth profitable, not just larger.

These are observations offered in good faith. MuraConnect has built something genuinely impressive in a short time. The question is simply whether the financial architecture is keeping pace with the growth.
