Three commercial observations from ProfitPulse

01

Capital allocated at scale without a return map

TradieSpec has raised $13 million and deployed it across a fleet of over 600 vehicles in four capital cities. Revenue sits at $15.3 million with 22 people running operations across six locations.

The central financial question is not how fast to grow but where each dollar generates the strongest return. Which markets lead on utilisation? Which vehicle categories carry the highest margin?

Without a formal capital allocation map, the risk is investing in the next city rather than the best city. A Capital Allocation Review produces exactly that clarity before the next commitment.

02

Working capital dynamics compound at growth pace

The rent to own model creates a layered cash flow structure that grows harder to manage as scale increases. Fleet acquisition is a large upfront outflow. Rental income spreads across over 2,500 accounts at varying intervals. Ownership transitions shift the cash profile at conversion.

With $13 million in fleet financing likely carrying covenants and the business growing at 57 percent, the gap between reported profit and available cash can widen quickly without active 13 week cash flow visibility.

Senior financial leadership absent at a decisive stage

At $15.3 million in revenue, $13 million in fleet financing, and an ambition to become Australia's largest trade vehicle provider, TradieSpec is making decisions that carry material financial consequence.

Market entry sequencing, covenant management, fleet doubling, and a potential next capital raise all require senior financial thinking.

With 22 employees, a full time CFO is premature. The Fractional CFO Partnership places a senior financial partner at the table on a monthly cadence, at exactly the stage where it matters most.

These are observations offered in good faith. TradieSpec has built something genuinely impressive. The question is simply whether the financial architecture matches the ambition.

Capital Allocation Review

$7,500 one off

An independent review of where capital is deployed across the vehicle fleet, markets, and customer segments, against the return each generates. Produces a prioritised redeployment plan with expected ROI on each move, giving the team a clear investment thesis before committing the next round of fleet capital.
