Three states, one growth plan?

Revenue moved from 3.2 million in FY21 to 16.2 million in FY25, and the next step is New South Wales in 2026, on the way to national coverage by 2028. Each new state carries setup cost, working capital lag and a hiring curve. A costed growth plan puts numbers behind that before the decision is made, not after.

02

Fifty people, one finance seat?

AH Fencing has built a genuine leadership bench, named sales, estimating and site leads under two managing directors. What is not visible publicly is a dedicated finance seat. A business growing 55 percent a year needs a permanent owner of the numbers, not a periodic look, with a third state about to add its own overhead.

03

Sixteen million, one capital story?

Every dollar going into a new warehouse, a new state's setup cost or working capital for the New South Wales launch is a capital allocation decision. At this pace it is worth knowing, dollar for dollar, whether that capital earns the return the fencing contracts themselves generate, before the next site is committed to.

These are observations offered in good faith. The company has built something impressive. The question is simply whether the financial architecture matches the ambition.
