01

Revenue doubled in one year. The financial architecture needs to keep pace.

National Media grew from roughly $9 million to $18.4 million in a single year. That kind of velocity is remarkable. It also means the financial reporting cadence, management pack structure, and capital allocation framework were likely built for a smaller business. At $18.4 million across 10 brands, the P and L story becomes harder to read without a clear framework. ProfitPulse works with growing businesses to build that reporting layer before complexity outpaces visibility.

02

Three acquisitions in 18 months. Integration economics need a disciplined approach.

National Media executed three acquisition programmes: the Workplace Health and Safety Shows, the Foodservice Australia portfolio from Specialised Events, and Cafe Culture and Cafe Biz Expo. Each carries its own cost base, revenue model, and integration risk. Without a framework for modelling acquisition returns and tracking integration milestones, the risk is that acquisitions look successful by revenue but unclear by margin. A senior financial partner with transaction experience closes that gap.

10 brands across 6 sectors. Which exhibitions deliver the real margin?

National Media runs exhibitions in food service, hospitality, workplace safety, fitness, architecture, and accommodation. Shows vary in size, exhibitor mix, and operational cost. At this portfolio scale, the critical question is which shows generate the highest margin after full cost allocation and which consume disproportionate team capacity. The Fractional CFO Partnership builds the monthly reporting infrastructure to answer that question, enabling faster and more capital-efficient decisions across the portfolio.
